

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

1           A modular and configurable display driver for driving a bistable liquid 2 crystal display. The driver has configurable outputs set by a plurality of 3 configuration bits for driving rows or columns of various displays
4 configurations. Thus, the driver can be economically mass produced for use 5 in many products.